Gospel originally meant the Christian message itself, but in the 2nd century it came to be used for the books in which the message was set out. The four canonical gospels — Matthew, Mark, Luke and John — were written between AD 70 and 100, building on older sources and traditions, and each gospel has its own distinctive understanding of ...From 'Notes on the Formation of the Gospels', by John Wijngaards; published in Background to the Gospels (Bangalore & Ann Arbor 1981) and Together in My Name (London 1991). The Gospels of Matthew, Mark and Luke were all written from the same perspective and probably used some of the same source material for their accounts. The gospels of Matthew, Mark, and Luke are referred to as the Synoptic Gospels because they include many of the same stories, often in a similar sequence and in similar or sometimes identical wording.
